Sheffield has revealed its budget for this year and the council has seen a big increase in spending in the council tax this year. The council has seen an increase in its budget from £2.6 billion to £2.7 billion - with the main increase being for the school halls and adult social care. Councillor Sue Cheesman, cabinet member for finance, said: "This is the first time since the 1980s we have seen this increase and we are all concerned about the effect this will have on the council's financial position. "This will impact on the services we provide to the community, such as libraries and social care. "We know our services are popular with people and we are committed 82157476af
